Deep sea body painting - in pictures

Lush staff across Europe have been wearing body paint to tell the story of deep-sea destruction. It is part of a project by the Bloom Association to symbolise the amazing diversity of deep-sea life by creating deep-sea body painting. Sign the Petition here.

Paragorgia Bubblegum coral. Make up by Maeva Coree, Paris, France. Photograph: Alexandre Faraci/Bloom Association/LUSH
Coryphaenoides rupestris Roundnose Grenadier. Milan, Italy. Photograph: Bloom Assocation/LUSH
Promachocrinus kerguenensis Sea Lily. Make up by Riina Laine, Helsinki, Finland. Photograph: Vanessa Forsten/Bloom Association/LUSH
Histioteuthis Heteropsis Jewel squid. Make up by Lorna Strachan, Glasgow, Scotland. Photograph: Felicity Millward/Bloom Association/LUSH
Stauroteuthis syrtensis Dumbo octopus. Make up by Léonie Gené, Hamburg, Germany. Photograph: Janine Gallert/Bloom Association/LUSH

Melanostomias tentaculatus Scaleless black dragonfish. Make up by Jasmina Bator, Zagreb, Croatia. Photograph: Vanja Šolin/Bloom Association/LUSH
Aglantha sp. Madrid, Spain. Photograph: Silvia Quiros/Bloom Association/LUSH

Hexactinellidé. Make up by Nadja Hluchovsky, Vienna, Austria. Photograph: Anja Lampert/Bloom Association/LUSH
Paraeuchaeta barbata Predatory copepod. Make up by Anneke van der Does, Amsterdam. Photograph: Alex de Groot/Bloom Association/LUSH

© 2014 Guardian News and Media Limited or its affiliated companies. All rights reserved.